

MainStream and Chase Paymentech Provide Merchants with Expanded Payment Choice and Added Security

Agreement provides improved network access and greater revenue opportunities

ATLANTA, Oct. 10, 2007 – MainStream Merchant Services, Inc., a leading provider of merchant payment processing solutions, announced today that it has become an independent sales organization (ISO) for Dallas-based Chase Paymentech, the world's premier provider of payment services.

MainStream provides merchants with custom gift card programs, PC and Web-based debit and credit card processing and the latest in point of sale (POS) terminals. With this agreement, MainStream customers will now benefit from access to Chase Paymentech's full offering of payments products and services, including the industry-leading secure, proprietary payments authorization network.

"MainStream's team is experienced in providing merchants of all sizes with payment processing solutions to create a competitive advantage and grow their revenues," said Kevin Sisk, Group Executive, Strategic Partners, Chase Paymentech. "This experience, combined with Chase Paymentech's spectrum of products and industry-leading customer service, will give merchants access to an expanded suite of payment services."

"As merchants look for ways to expand revenue opportunities and grow their businesses, our relationship with Chase Paymentech ensures that MainStream will always be able to meet their needs, no matter how unique," said Jerome Vignale, president of MainStream. "Further, Chase Paymentech's state-of-the-art network provides merchants with an additional layer of security. As the payments landscape continues to evolve, we will work with Chase Paymentech to ensure customers stay ahead of the curve."
